Clarksville, W. Va.—The starting gun in the 1924 presidential race was sounded here today with the meeting of democratic leaders for the formal notification tonight to John W. Davis of his selection as the standard-bearer of the party.

Arranging before the national committee to suggest the selection of Cleo L. Shaver as chairman, Mr. Davis urged the necessity for organization and declared that it was the duty of the committee and himself to see that the country is fully informed concerning those men that will influence their decision in November.

Mr. Davis told the committee it was its peculiar task to stimulate those organizations already at work to build up those that are weak and to furnish organization in those places where it is lacking.

Clarksville, W. Va.—The starting gun in the 1924 presidential race was sounded here today with the meeting of democratic leaders for the formal notification tonight to John W. Davis of his selection as the standard-bearer of the party.

Arranging before the national committee to suggest the selection of Cleo L. Shaver as chairman, Mr. Davis was to present his field marshal and to outline to the representatives from the states his ideas of how his campaign should be conducted.

Reorganization of the committee has been deferred until the time of the notification ceremonies as has been the selection of the chairman of the finance, executive and campaign committee.

While there is a disposition on the part of some members of the national committee to suggest amendments to the two thirds and unit rules governing the national conventions, many leaders were inclined to postpone any consideration of such instructions.

After the committee meeting, Mr. Davis' program was left free for real until the notification ceremonies at Goff Plaza. The program at the Plaza will open with "The Star Spangled Banner" played by the band, followed by the "Bay" Chorus, Anderson, Uncle, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, will offer the invocation and Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana will deliver the notification address.

Mr. Davis, in responding, will sound the keynote of his campaign.

New York's prominent democrats from the southern states requested political headquarters here that Senator La Follette and his progressive ticket will get a fair larger vote in the "solid south" than heretofore has been expected. The vote is not expected to be large enough to upset the democratic calculations as to the outcome of the election in the states but it will be indicative of a swing within the "heart" of the democratic party which may require considerable attention at some time in the near future.

There is no particular sympathy in the south for the La Follette ticket as a whole, but for him who will be 90 percent of the protest variety, the protest in this case is dominated by the knights of the hooded order. It has pointed out that some of these states stood as solid as New York itself in favor of the anti-Klux demonstrations in the convention hall but that one instance aroused an anger and left a hurt which will be felt for years in that particular portion of the south.

The New York galleries and many of the northern delegations laughed and boozed and blazed and shouted when the band played "Marching

the convention hall but that one in-

London—The allied and German representatives attached to the international reparations conference have reached a full agreement on the Dawes program.

The balance in the state treasury dropped to $16,949,377 on Aug. 1, the financial report of State Treasurer Solomon Levitan shows.

The balance on July 1 was $19,488,697.

The difference occasioned principally by the increase in disbursements is shown. Receipts during the month amounted to $2,231,333, and disbursements, $3,161,298.

The balance in the general fund is $12,473,789, compared with $14,942, 140 at the first of last month. Receptions of this fund during July amounted to $1,532,911, and disbursements, $3,161,298.

During the war 600,000 colored men and boys were called up under the draft. Not one of those sought to evade it. They took their places wherever assigned in defense of the nation of which they are just as true citizens as are any others. The suggestion of denying any measure of their full political rights to such a great majority of our population as the colored people is one which, however it might be received in other quarters, could not possibly be permitted by one who feels a responsibility for living up to the traditions and maintaining the principles of a great national party.

"Our constitution guarantees equal rights to all our citizens without discrimination on account of race or color. I have taken my oath to support that constitution. It is the source of your rights and my rights."

"You have suggested that in some fashion I should bring influence to bear to prevent the possibility of a colored man being nominated for congress. In reply, I quote my great predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt:

"I cannot consent to take the position that the door of hope—the door of opportunity—is to be shut upon any man, no matter how worthy, purely upon the grounds of race or color."

MATTED FIELDS 3441 DAIRY COWS CUT GRAIN YIELD SOLD DURING JULY

Survey of Crop Conditions in Wisconsin—Tobacco Is Backward.

With the harvest season at hand, southern Wisconsin farmers are experiencing difficulty in cutting grain because of fields being flattened and matted by torrents of rain and wind. This condition comes after prospects of a good crop.

There will be a certain decrease in the expected yield in fields south of the grain fields, for the grain is so flat on the ground. In many instances, it cannot be picked up by the cutting machines.

To offset the uncertain corn condition, the southern half of Wisconsin has had a big hay crop, and on the side of the poor harvesting conditions, the small grain crop are favorable.

Record Hay Crop

In only one region—a group of 11 counties in the northwestern section of the state—is the hay crop below average. A late spring together with a June drought made the hay thin in that corner of the state.

Except where clover dried out badly last summer, clover yields were heavy and especially so in this section. Alfalfa has made an excellent crop and good weather for cutting will mean a good second cutting. Authorities now agree that two cuttings of alfalfa is the best in the long run.

The bumper hay crop will mean a lot of milk from good feeding of dairy cows this fall. While the corn crop is backward, the grain crop has every indication of coming through fine for silage and a considerable percentage of southern Wisconsin corn goes into the silo.

Grasses Promising

Potato growers are in good condition all over the state. Crop conditions were very spotted, due to drought areas, but the uniformity of the crop this year is very unusual.

Except for a threatening dry spell in the Badger district, the crop has had very favorable weather conditions. Stands are good, and vines are made for seasonal growth and are thirty at this time. Condition of the Wisconsin crop is given by crop reporters as 90 per cent of normal—considerably above the average. Good yields were very common two years ago when the condition on August 1 was reported as 82 per cent.

Extreme damage by the recent storms seems to be confined to some fields in Ozaukee county that have been drowned out.

Tobacco Is Backward

The tobacco crop in Wisconsin is below average for this date. The crop is especially backward in the Vernon and Crawford district but somewhat further advanced in the southern district. Fields run very uneven and reports are frequent of rotted out tobacco. The August 1 condition was reported as 79 per cent of normal, compared to 82 per cent as the five-year average condition for this date. No general damage was done by the recent storms, although mostly drained fields will be set back still more by too much rain.

3,500 ATTEND BIG CATHOLIC PICNIC

Marquette University Heads are Speakers Before Holy Name Societies.

The largest and most enthusiastic gathering of Catholic men and women held in this vicinity in many months, took place Sunday at Yost's park when 3,500 gathered for the rally and picnic meeting of the Holy Name societies of all districts which includes 17 parishes in the 15 towns and cities surrounding Janesville. Every society in the district was represented with the Rev. Archibald Talmadge, Marquette University, Milwaukee, spiritual archdiocesan director for the principal speaker.

The Pathmarks-Morse band gave a concert following the picnic dinner after which the Rev. Dr. James F. Ryan, this city, took charge of the meeting.

Father Talmadge explained the objects of the Holy Name society, which is an organization for Catholic men and women chiefly of the international meeting which the society is to hold in September in Washington. The hierarchy and laymen of the country and the foreign countries are to be represented by thousands, he said. A feature of the convention will be a parade which President Coolidge is to review on Pennsylvania avenue, with the cardinals of this country in the lead. Joseph M. Connelly, president of St. Louis Knights of Columbus, and Dr. G. Gould McMillian, spiritual director for that branch, have been chosen as delegates.

Prof. Max Schatz, dean of the law department at Marquette university, spoke eloquently on "Some Aspects of American Life." He summed up his address by saying that the ideals of the Holy Name society are but the ideals of every good American.

The constitution of the United States, he said, is based upon Christian ideals, and these Christian ideals should permeate the lives of citizens in all of its phases social and civil. The speaker told of the wave of dissension regarding the belief of the divinity of Christ and explained that one of the objects of the Holy Name society is to defend the belief of the divinity.

The Rev. Charles McBride, St. Thomas church, Beloit, and the Rev. Sidney Dwyer, now pastor of St. Paul's church, Evansville, gave short talks. Other clergymen at the meeting were Rev. Charles M. Olson, and Gerald McMillian, this city; J. P. Hartin, Ederton; Michael McCarthy, Fortville; Joseph Hanz, Beloit.

Races for women and children were put on after the program and a tug of war held in which Janesville came out victorious against Beloit and Evansville.

$1,000 MISSING IN Beloit ROBBERY

100 Fountain Pens and $600
Stolen from Drug Store.

A daylight robbery of the Wiesner drug store in the Goodland block, Beloit, that netted nearly $1,000 occurred Sunday afternoon when the store was closed.

The robbers obtained $629.50 in cash and 100 fountain pens valued at $300. Entrance was made through an inside door of the Goodland block that made it impossible to identify the building. This was dimpled and forced open. A clerk, W. H. Ziehm, discovered the robbery about 4 o'clock, when he went to work.

Police Monday had made no arrests and unless new clues develop it may remain unsolved, as have two other robberies two months ago, when a stock of fountain pens was stolen, the store being burglarized at night and entrance forced through a rear door.

Band to Play
Concert Series

Mothers of Janesville children will be entertained at the playgrounds Wednesday for the last time this season at a band concert and exhibitions that have been planned especially for them, Arthur Wheeler, director of playgrounds, announced Monday.

The Janesville high school band of 40 pieces directed by Capt. Ralph G. Jack will give a short concert at each of five playgrounds Wednesday afternoon the programs being arranged in half hour intervals so that they will be able to make the rounds. The opening program will be at the Washington at 1:30 p.m. and followed by the others, Douglas 2, Washington, 2:30, Adams, 3 and Jefferson, 3:30.

Basketry, crocheting and mat work, together with other art work, that has been made at the playgrounds will be on exhibition. Refreshments will be served.

A special feature of the program at the Adams will be the presentation of the Kiwanis cup, emblematic of the school having won highest honors in 1923 playground athletic participation.

Kiwanians Off to District Session

Intent upon "bringing home the bacon" which, in this instance, is the 1923 convention of the district Kiwanis clubs, 26 members of the Janesville Kiwanis club, left Sunday for La Crosse, where they will attend the 12th convention. The sessions opened Monday and continue through Tuesday when the meeting place for 1925 will be selected.

Nearly all of the party drove by automobile, taking advantage of ideal weather. Wives accompanied 18 or 20 of the members. The Janesville Kiwanis club invitation will be extended to Stephen Colter. It is supported by eight or nine clubs in this vicinity.

Occupying as it does the position of being the foremost Kiwanis club in the district, having led every attendance contest since it was organized in 1911, the club expects the invitation will meet with a hearty and probably favorable consideration. The club members will carry on an energetic campaign before the selection is made, having cards and buttons calling attention to the lower City's invitation.

Hopes to Obtain

Paving of Islands

City Manager Henry Traxler is hopeful of reaching an agreement with the two railroad companies whereby the islands at the Academy street crossing will be paved with concrete this year at the expense of the railroads. The companies have agreed to replace between the rails, but the thought is to have permanent paving laid in the islands, that is, the spaces between each set of tracks. This is similar to the way the Five Points crossing was improved. It is expected the city will pave the islands and charge the cost to the two companies to be paid over a 10-year period.

STATE SUPERVISION
(By Associated Press)

Madison — A total of 19,949 miles of highways is under supervision of the state highway department, compilations of the department announced yesterday. The compilation includes all highways constructed from 1911, when the highway commission was created, to the close of 1923.

Gravel and stone construction highways lead other types in the total mileage under state supervision, this class including 8,481 miles. Graded earth runs a close second, with 8,212 miles. Other types include: shale and clay, 1,517; concrete and other types, 1,556.

The average cost of Wisconsin highways constructed under supervision of the state department, including bridges and culverts, has been $4,696 per mile, the report indicates.

MOST OF POPULATION NEAR STATE HIGHWAYS
(By Associated Press)

Madison — Ninety-five per cent of the population of Wisconsin live less than three miles from patrolled trunk highways, according to estimates prepared and announced by the state highway department.

Slightly per cent of the state's population lives on patrolled trunk highways, the tabulation further shows.

The areas of the state in which most persons live more than three miles from the state patrolled system, are chiefly in the northern, un-settled section of the state, highway officials point out. A number of counties have no residents at all live more than three miles from a patrolled trunk highway.

SCANLAN CAR IS STOLEN IN BOLD ROBBERY

One of the boldest robberies of an automobile in Janesville took place Sunday night when a five passenger touring car, owned by Grever C. Scanlan, proprietor of the Scanlan Auto Supply store, was taken from its parking place at the corner of Bonham and Sherman avenue, while a number of people sat on their front porches nearby.

The robbery occurred about 9 o'clock, a short distance from the position last January when the贼 took over the support of the school nurse's post and made it a part of the regular health department work. Previously it had been conducted independently by the Red Cross and Miss Amerpohl was appointed to the position last January when the贼 took over the support of the school nurse's post and made it a part of the regular health department work.

Miss Amerpohl, city school nurse for the past seven months, has handed in her resignation to City Manager Henry Traxler to take effect Sept. 1. Her successor has not been appointed. Her plans for the future have not been made public.

TREATING CANCER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington.—A few weeks ago a Canadian doctor arose at a medical meeting to state that he had isolated the organism which causes cancer. Newspapers reported that the doctor's speech was received by his associates with mingled jeers and cheers.

Since this dramatic incident, public interest in cancer has mounted to an unusually high pitch. Rumors of startling cures and discoveries are being circulated, and there are strange stories to be heard regarding the Canadian doctor's mysterious discovery.

There is no disease that is of greater interest to the entire medical profession and to the public than cancer. Doctors do not know what causes cancer, and they are, one and all, anxious that the cause be found. When the cause of malaria was traced to a germ carried by mosquitoes from diseased persons to healthy ones, the importance of screened houses and of sanitary sewage became evident. As a result, malaria is comparatively rare now in most parts of the country. When the bacillus of tuberculosis was discovered, scientists tracked the germ to its hiding places, and the public learned how carelessness was responsible for the spread of tuberculous germs. Since the bacillus has been isolated, science has learned enough about it to cut the death rate from tuberculosis in half. Diphtheria antitoxin could not be made until the germ which caused the disease was isolated and studied.

All of these diseases are being fought with encouraging success because doctors know what it is that they are fighting. But cancer is on the increase, in spite of the surgeon's skill in removing it in early stages. When the cause of the disease is known, and when its mode of attack is discovered, doctors will undoubtedly be able to combat cancer with greater success. In consequence, specialists are only too eager to learn anything new about this baffling disease.

The medical profession's cold attitude toward the Canadian doctor's announcement is due to the fact that he has not proceeded according to the customary rules of the research game as it is played. He says that he has isolated a bacillus which is the cause of cancer, and that as a result he has been able to make a serum which can be used to combat the cancer bacillus.

According to a doctor who was present at the now famous medical meeting, the cancer investigator showed lantern slides of germs which he declared were cancer bacilli. But he did not present his discovery to the medical profession or to the world in the customary way. He refused to give to doctors samples of his bacillus, or samples of the culture media in which the bacillus will grow and multiply. Nor would he make public his staining process. It is by staining bacteria with dyes that the scientist is able to study their appearance. The germs of a certain disease will stand out in colorful relief on a glass slide if it is colored by the proper dye preparation.

The doctors felt that if the investigator was certain of his discovery he would not hesitate to make it public. The medical profession prides itself on its fairness in such matters. When the diphtheria germ was isolated at about the same time by two investigators, each working independently, the germ was named the Klebs-Loeffler bacillus after both discoverers. Dr. F. G. Banting, the Canadian who has given the world insulin, was honored by a Nobel prize, and was given prizes in money which he generously divided with his associate workers. There is a $100,000 prize, offered by Lord Atholstan of Montreal, which awaits the discoverer of a medical cure for cancer. But this Canadian cancer specialist has so far refused to permit the investigation which must be made before a claim such as his is recognized as valid.

The announcement of a cancer serum discovery has aroused the hopes of a great many cancer sufferers, many of whom are in advanced stages of the disease and who can not be cured by surgery. Public interest in cancer has inspired inventors of cancer "cures" to flood the country at this time with advertisements of their remedies.

In a statement made a few days ago, Dr. G. A. Soper, managing director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, said: "I say with all the emphasis at my command, after full deliberation—with the assurance that it represents not my individual opinion, but that of an overwhelming number of the men who have studied cancer most deeply—that, at the present moment, nobody should be believed to have a medical cure for cancer. Nothing has occurred in the past few months, no statement has been made, no demonstration has been given, no evidence has been put forward through the press, before any one has the right to say that he has found a cure for cancer."

Opposition to snow removal from main traveled roads comes most emphatically from those who think it costs too much. There is some opposition also from those who think we ought to accept what Nature gives us without a murmur and take a whipping from the weather, lying down.

The time to prepare for snow removal is now and the time to discuss and settle the question for this winter is here. It is of more importance than a political question of the fortunes of candidates. It has to do with every resident in this community.

The aggregate loss to the people of this community was enormous. To have such a situation continue is foreign to the present period of civilization.

It belongs to the day of the ox-team, the corn mill in the back yard, the spinning wheel in the home, the pewter spoons and the buffalo robe. Those days have gone forever. It was as necessary to have snow for sleds then as it is to have open roads now for wheeled vehicles.

Opposition to snow removal from main traveled roads comes most emphatically from those who think it costs too much. There is some opposition also from those who think we ought to accept what Nature gives us without a murmur and take a whipping from the weather, lying down.

We need more bus lines out of Janesville. We need one right now to reach Shippensburg, Clinton and Sharon, since the train service has been taken off. But men hesitate about investing in such needed lines because there is no assurance of operation for more than two thirds of the winter at least. That assurance ought to be forthcoming with a definite program by the county board working in unison with business men of the several communities and others along the routes who are interested in shipping and travel.

There are some of course who do not care. They are satisfied to do like the mountaineer, sew the children up for the winter and let them wait for spring to get out.

* * * The progressive citizen is not so satisfied.

When it comes to a mixed drink, alcohol and gasoline spell death, jail and Jim jams.

"Dry" Missouri

In Missouri, which once went wet by a considerable majority, owing to the very heavy wet vote in St. Louis and Kansas City, notwithstanding almost every other county in the state was dry under local option, there has just been administered a general defeat to a candidate, Judge Henry S. Preist, who ran for the nomination for governor on the democratic ticket in the primaries, on a platform that was wet and for the repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead law. The plurality of the dry candidate, who was equally outspoken against the Preist wet position, is nearly 100,000 votes. Maybe this will be a lesson to the wet but evidently not, as they already have several alibis. And the republican wet candidate was also given a good licking.

Calvin Coolidge finds answer to the prayer of old Thomas Fuller when he said, "Lord, let here be thine alphabet. Grant us that we may put the letters together so as to make good sense."

Governor Al Smith refuses to be a sacrifice on the altar of Davis. He will make a few speeches, notably in Wisconsin where the democrats are either La Follette followers if they are in accord with Bryan, or Coolidge democrats if they are in favor of Davis. They want to vote for the winner and in Wisconsin the way to vote for the winner is not to divide but to support Coolidge and Davis. So Gov. Smith will make a few speeches where he can neither help nor harm Mr. Davis. But—there is the rub—as for sacrificing himself

THE SUMMER COTTAGE

I sing the summer cottage by the lake,

Which parents suffer for the children's sake;

A little shack beneath sun's azure skies,

Haven of rest and hanging doors and eaves.

Its sheltering roof keeps out the burning sun;

It seems to know that it was built for fun;

No serious care its workmanship bespeaks—

Only when it rains it ever leaks.

Its sheltering roof keeps out the burning sun;

It seems to know that it was built for fun;

No serious care its workmanship bespeaks—

Only when it rains it ever leaks.

There is a welcome at its kindly door,

Used weekly by a dozen friends or more;

The host, kept busy gathering meat and fruits,

Rings in his guests, wrings out their bathing suits.

Fresh vegetables—this the tale we tell—

Daily men come with garden truck to sell;

But we who live these summer cottage days

Find beets and onions all they ever raise.

Here the moon glows and beams the evening star,

Here all of nature's joys and sorrows are;

Here one may feast his eyes on lovely scenes

And feed himself on salmon and sardines.

I sing the summer cottage by the lake,

Which parents suffer for the children's sake;

A little shack beneath sun's azure skies,

Haven of rest and hanging doors and eaves.

HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1924.

During the busy hours of this day helpful stars rule, according to astrology. Mercury and Uranus are in benevolent aspect. Later Jupiter and Mars are adverse.

Newspapers and magazines should enjoy a period of unprecedented prosperity. A return to the pastime will affect places of amusement the seers predict.

Advertising is subject to the best possible direction of the stars, will be most beneficial while this rule prevails.

At this time Uranus is believed to impart to people who depend on newspapers for their political guidance the power to make their own decisions with intelligence.

MISTRESS WILDING:

A ROMANCE, BY RAFAEL SABATINI.

(Author of "Scarabouche", "Captain Blood", "Fortune's Fool", etc.) "Be assured, gentlemen," he said, "that I have no further evidence to offer you so that this lady is suffered to withdraw with me." And he took in his own a hand that had been amazement and unwillingness to hold him. That touch of his seemed to drive her fears and to restore her confidence in mortal terror in which she had been until his coming dragged from her now. She was no longer alone and abandoned to the vindictiveness of rude and violent men. She had beside her one in whom experience had taught her to have faith.

Louis Purvis, Major of the fort, and Earl of Feversham, coughed with mock disinterest under cover of his hand. "Ahem!"

He was a comely man with a long nose, good lidded eyes, a humorous mouth, and a weak chin. When he looked at her, he was a weak, good-natured scoundrel. He was resplendent at the moment in a blue satin dressing-gown stiff with gold lace, for he had been interrupted by Blake's arrival in the very act of putting himself to bed, and his head—divested of his wigs—was bound up in a scarf of many colors.

At his side, the red-faced captain, arrested by the general's sardonic cough, stood, a red-faced, freckled boy, looking to his superior for orders.

"Don't you have 'art Sare Rowlan?" said Feversham composedly to his bad English. "Who are you?"

"This lady's husband," answered Wilding, whereupon the captain stared and Feversham's brows went up in surprised amazement.

"So he's 'true'?" quoth the latter, his tone suggesting that he had adopted him to him. "It's a different colour to your story, Sare Rowlan?" Then he added in a chuckle. "Ho ho—l'amour!" and laughed outright.

Blake, gathering together his wits and his limbs at the same time, made shift to rise.

"What a pleasant note their relationship 'matter'!" he began. He would have added more, but the Frenchman thought this question one that needed answering.

"Parbleu!" he swore, his nose rising. "It seems to matter something."

"Pah, mat!" cried Blake, red in the face from pain that he had been doing to conceive that if he had run away with his wife for her own sake I had fetched her to you?" He lunched forward as he spoke, but kept his distance from Wilding, who stood between them and him.

Feversham bowed sardonically. "You are such flatfoots, Sare Rowlan," said he, laughter bubbling in his words.

Blake looked his scorn of this trivial Frenchman, who, upon seeing what appeared to be the comedy of an outraged husband overtaking the man he had left behind his wife, forgot the serious business, part of which Sir Rowland had already imparted to him. Captain Wentworth—a time-serving gentleman of a British army that he might be in the general's favour.

"I have told your lordship," said Blake, "that on his return to the twenty men I had sent you, as well as Weston Norris, are dead in Bridgewater, and that my plan to carry off King Monmouth has come to nought, all because we were betrayed by this woman. It is now my further privilege to point out to your lordship the man to whom she sold us."

Feversham misliked Sir Roland's arrogant tone, misliked his angry, scornful glance. His eyes narrowed. The laughter faded slowly from his face.

"Yes, yes, I remember," said he. "It is lady, you have told us before you. Very well. But you have not told us who betrays you to the lady?" And he looked inquisitorially at Blake.

The baronet's jaw dropped; his face lost some of its high colour. He was stunned by the question as the bird had been by the blow of a leaden against a pane of glass. He had crashed into an obstruction so transparent that he had not seen it.

"So?" said Feversham, and he stroked the crest of his chin. "Captain Wentworth, he is kind as to call 't Guard."

Wentworth moved to obey, but before he had gone round the table, Blake had looked behind him and espied Richard shrinking by the door.

"By heaven!" he cried. "I can more than answer your lordship's question."

Wentworth stopped, looking at Feversham.

"'Voront," said the General. "I can place you in possession of the man who has wrought our ruin. He is there," and he pointed theatrically to Richard.

Feversham looked at the High Sheriff in some bewilderment. Indeed, he was having a most bewildered evening or morning, rather for it was now then on the stroke of one o'clock. "An' who are you, sure?" he asked.

Richard came forward, nervously for what was to follow. It had just occurred to him that he held a hand which should trunap any trick of Sir Roland's vindictiveness, and the prospect heartened and comforted him.

"I am this lady's brother, my lord," he answered, and his voice was fairly steady.

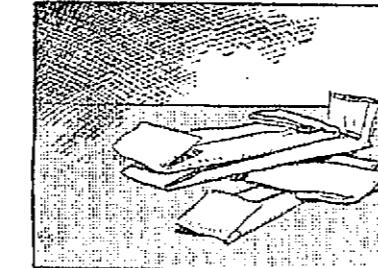

"Pah!" said Feversham, and, smiling, he turned to Wentworth.

"Quite a family party, sir," said the captain, smiling back.

"'Ole' main bout-a-fa'!" said the General, laughing outright, and

SUNBURN

No one has to be told what sunburn is, but sometimes mothers fail to realize that a hard case of sunburn is a dangerous thing. The skin is a delicate organ, and some heating or cold can easily injure it. Sunburn can be kept wet with a soft cloth and covered with a soft cloth.

Children who are "crazy" to be tanned, especially girls, ought to know that a tanned skin seldom ever wears out. It is right to be healthy and live fresh air and outdoor life, but it is just as well in the hot sun to make some effort to protect oneself from the hot rays of the sun, and if girls can't be made to use good judgment for its own sake, perhaps their vanity can be appealed to.
